If you are like me, you're probably sick of hearing about the bad economy. Unfortunately, it is still with us so we continue to deal with it. Not surprising, this economy created some challenges for Wings of Mercy this year. Our flight needs increased while our donations decreased. This combination forced us, for the first time ever, to use money from our endowment fund. Obviously it is not an ideal situation. Fortunately, we are blessed to have an Endowment Fund to weather such a storm. However, we can't rely solely on that. We need to do everything in our power to keep our organization going so we never turn down a person in need.

This year Wings of Mercy worked hard to overcome these challenges. Earlier this year we moved into new office space which reduced our rent by 60%. We also changed our staffing level from two full time employees to one full time and one part time. And finally to control our biggest expense, fuel reimbursement, we negotiated fuel prices at each airport for every FBO.

On the revenue side, we implemented some new ways to make donations. First, we added a link to our website allowing donors to make contributions using a credit card. It is an easy process.

The subject of fuel reimbursement has been a hot topic. I wanted to give a summary of the issue and an update on where we stand. When Wings of Mercy was founded, 19 years ago, we solicited and received permission from our local FSDO office to reimburse aircraft owners for fuel consumed while conducting charitable flights for Wings of Mercy.

In November of 2008, the FAA issued a written opinion that the practice of reimbursing for fuel was only allowed in cases where the volunteer pilot organization showed that it operated at higher safety standards than the basics required in Part 91 of the FARs.

While Wings of Mercy had specific permission from the FAA to reimburse for fuel costs, and our guidelines do require safety standards that far exceed the minimums in Part 91, this general prohibition in 2008 raised concern. Specifically, as to whether or not the new interpretation superseded the specific permission we received 19 years ago.

The board of directors took the position that we wanted to petition the FAA to provide us with a formal, and written exemption from the 2008 position taken by the FAA. In other words, we wanted to see both arms of the FAA on the same page regarding this issue.

Welcome to the New Normal

By Pilot Jeff Ostrander

Sabrina's eyes are bright this morning. She does not quite smile, but looks me over, turns her head a bit to track my movement across the room. Three years ago – had I deserved such an honor – she might have skipped over to give me a hug. Not now. Sabrina does not skip.

It is different with Jacob, another child I know. He bursts into the room, into your heart, with a radiant smile and arms open wide. Jacob skips and, if you're lucky, Jacob delivers a fierce little-boy hug, but Jacob does not hear. It is different, too, with Reilly who can do anything that other ten-year-old girls do except that, on a bad day, Reilly cannot breathe.

Well, back to work. Pete and I have come to Holland in an airplane on this stormy morning to take Sabrina and her parents on a journey. I first met Sabrina a few months ago when she needed to come home from a hospital in Minneapolis. It is always the same on the first trip; you meet this person, compare them to what you think is normal,

What is normal? try to understand what it is that they have lost. It was the same way with Jacob and Reilly.

Have they found a way to live within this New Normal, or are they just hanging on until the gale passes? After a few trips through this cycle you begin to wonder, what is normal?

Imagine this: You open your eyes and light appears. You think a certain thought and your hand moves smoothly to your face. Without trying, you detect sound waves, decode them into a message, compose a response and send back a sound of your own. You cannot explain why any of this works, but it does, and after a while you come to think of these abilities, if you think of them at all, not as gifts but as personal possessions. They form part of the mysterious Normal, the foundation upon which we stand and rarely look beneath – until something changes.

It changed dramatically for Sabrina who, at three years old, seemed a normal little girl. Now, three years later, her arms and legs hang limp. She thinks the thought, but nothing moves. She hears the message and composes a response, but she cannot make the sound come out. It was the same way with Jacob and Reilly.

A while ago, something began to crack in my own family's foundation. My mother began to forget small things, to repeat herself. Not long after, she could not find her way home in the car and once set off, on foot, to look for my father in a distant city. Now, aside from the occasional quip that echoes her forgotten nature, my mother sinks further and further into a new normal.

So Pete and I spend much of the day in an airplane, getting Sabrina and her parents back to the hospital. They are excited with her progress; her eyes really are brighter and the cock of her pretty little head more alert than they have seen in a long while. They think it is the feeding tube, of all things, that has helped. I shake my head. Imagine that; thankful for a feeding tube.

Or stranger still, imagine this; that it had not occurred to me until this moment to marvel that my body somehow transforms even a bag of vending machine potato chips into power which fuels thought and motion and a multitude of supporting systems that I cannot begin to understand. Sabrina is thankful for a clumsy tube. I am unthankful for an elegant system which – because it is so elegant and reliable – I forget is there. Unthankful, sometimes, that a precious little boy wants me, of all people, to go with him for a bike ride.

I wish it were different with me, that I did not have these disabilities. But I am learning from Sabrina, from my Father and my son, from Jacob and Reilly and their loving families that a rich life is not about being normal. It's about being thankful to go for a bike ride – a bike ride that in no way advances my personal objectives or reduces my insecurity about the future. Big ideas usually come down to small choices. A little more work or this bike ride with my son?

A day at the office or a trip with Sabrina?

Sometimes, it is choosing what is really more important. Sometimes, it is trusting that He who gives us life and breath will somehow enable us to pay the bills. Always, it is remembering that what I make through my own effort is so absurdly small when compared to what I have been given.

and their loving families that a rich life is not about being normal. It's about being thankful.

For who makes you different from anyone else? What do you have that you did not receive? And if you did receive it, why do you boast as though you did not?

Simply go to our web page at www.wingsofmercy.org and click on “How Do I Contribute?” then scroll down to the bottom of the page and click on “Donate”. Secondly, we have signed up with GoodSearch.com. Many of you purchase items on the internet. By using GoodSearch.com, you can still purchase those same items but this time Good Search will contribute a percentage of the price to the organization of your choice. For example, I recently purchased an item from Best Buy. I started at www.goodsearch.com, typed in Best Buy and then selected Wings of Mercy for the contribution. There was no additional cost for the item I purchased and yet Wings of Mercy received a donation. So please consider this as the Christmas buying season approaches.

Wings of Mercy will continue to find ways to “beat” this economy. Any way you can help will be greatly appreciated. I can’t thank you enough for your past support. Let’s continue to work together to “Give Wings to Those in Need”.

Have a Blessed Christmas and a great 2011.

We worked with the FAA for almost a year and a half to get the formal approval we were seeking. I am very happy to report that Wings of Mercy is the first volunteer pilot organization in the country to obtain a formal and written exemption from the 2008 interpretation!

In determining whether we meet the higher level of safety standard the FAA scrutinized our guidelines and practices. Our guidelines were accepted with the requirement that we make only a few changes. Most of which are minor.

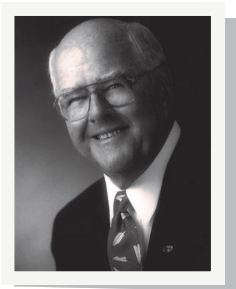

We will be implementing the changes and rolling out new guidelines over the next month. Stay tuned.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year - 2011

Minnesota

Glenn Young, Flight Director

Wings of Mercy / Minnesota is the newest and remains the smallest of the three Wing's of Mercy organizations - but we're doing our best to continue growing and serving people in need in Minnesota, North & South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and wherever we are needed. Generally our destinations are to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, MN, or to the U of M hospitals in St. Paul, MN.

We have accomplished 931 missions to date, with an average of +/-5 trips per month.

Economic conditions have made it difficult to maintain current aircraft, and to recruit new aircraft and pilots, but we have been able to hold our ground and, as always, will hold out hope for improved economic conditions.

We currently have 4 twins in our ranks, a BE58 Baron with our stretcher, a PA34 Seneca, an Aerostar, and a PA31P Pressurized Navajo (which also makes occasional trips for Wings of Mercy West Michigan).

I occasionally receive requests for Italy, the Mediterranean area, and Germany. Until we find a sponsor with a Global Express, G-V, or comparable aircraft, destinations like this are simply beyond our means. If you know of a company or an individual with these types of resources available, please send them my way!

East Michigan

Chuck Binder, Secretary

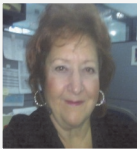

2010 is shaping up as another busy year for East Michigan as we have just crossed 35 times around the world for our recipients. A total of 1345 Missions have been completed, spanning almost 871,000 miles.

We have flown 112 missions this year covering over 67,000 mi or 2.6 times around the world. Nine missions are being coordinated for the next few weeks.

July saw Wings East Michigan supported in a very successful fund raiser charity softball game put on by the Detroit Red Wings Alumni Association. Thanks to volunteer Tim Draeger and many others who provided invaluable assistance. A slideshow of the event can be seen at http://www.wingseastmi.org/Red_Wings/Red_Wings_home.html.

People always ask me how they can support Wings of Mercy. We now have a new way that is in place thanks to Kathleen Workman.

Kathleen took great care in purchasing “Wings Wear” for all to buy. There are a variety of items to choose from with new items being added throughout the year. We do have the brochure online at www.wingsofmercy.org just in time for the Holidays. There is the standard blue logo to choose from along with this new pilots logo. All of the proceeds from the sales go directly to Wings of Mercy.

West Michigan

Grace Spelde, Flight Director

One of the unexpected duties that I have as a flight director for Wings of Mercy is asking people how much they weigh. It is very important for a pilot to have accurate weight and balance calculations to insure safe flight. “And what is your current weight?” ...I ask as nonchalantly as I know how. The voice on the other end has to give me a number and if the caller is female, we laugh about how awkward the situation is and move on to the next question.

The tables were turned on me recently when I had the opportunity to go on a Wings of Mercy flight myself. I was excited about getting to fly with one of our veteran pilots until it dawned on me that I was going to have to tell him how much I weigh. My husband does not know how much I weigh. It was then that I learned a very valuable lesson. By the time most patients turn to Wings of Mercy for help, they have been humbled in a myriad of ways the least of which is telling me how much they weigh. In humility, I am committed to protecting their privacy and their dignity any way I can. Getting a little taste of what it is like to be at the mercy of Wings can only make me a better flight director.

I did tell my pilot my weight, prefacing it with the fact that I am 5’9” and have “big bones.” And with the holidays upon us I have the following blessing for anyone who wants a weight they can claim without qualm...

May your stuffing be tasty

May your turkey be plump

May your potatoes and gravy have nary a lump

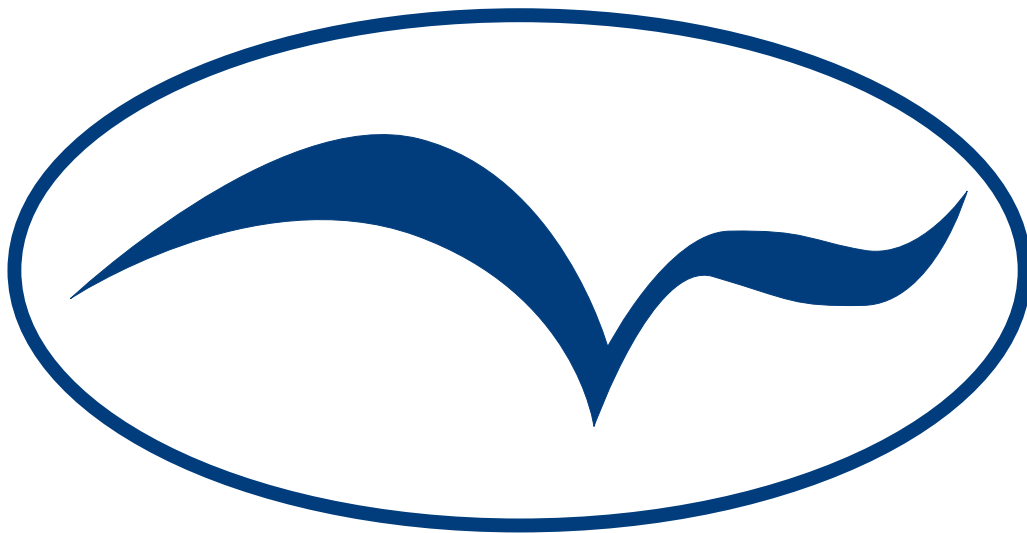

May your yams be delicious and your pies take the prize

And may your Thanksgiving Dinner stay off Your thighs
