A Patient Story

Crew Berens

Two year old Crew Berens has neurofibromatosis, an inherited nervous system disorder that can cause tumors to form all over his body.

Some of the leading doctors treating this disorder are part of a clinic at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

Wings of Mercy pilots, PIC Drew Grooters with SIC's Larry Fuerst and Jeff Ostrander, made it possible for Crew and his family to get to and from Birmingham.

As a result, Crew has been accepted into a clinical trial that has the potential to improve his quality of life dramatically.

"Our son Crew loved flying so much! What an amazing experience. Thank you Drew, the co-pilots, and Wings of Mercy staff who all helped us! Thank you for making our medical trip easier."

-Mom, Hilary Berens

From the Staff

Time is Money...invest it wisely.

Nowhere is Ben Franklin's adage more true than in the aviation world. It costs an average of 5 hours of your time, and if you are an aircraft owner, time on your plane, to conduct a Wings flight, and that does not include everything you do before and after the flight.

Your time is our most valuable resource and we are grateful for every minute you invest in this ministry.

On average, you donate right at 25 hours of flight time a year.

That's 5 flights for people in need.

Like most ministries, we have some who donate much more time and some who donate much less.

You know what works best for you.

Currently, our time donations aren't quite keeping up with the need. Maybe there are some of you who have room to make a bigger investment.

Please check your calendar and then check the Wings flight schedule and see if you have some time to volunteer for a flight.

And remember, when you spend your time flying for Wings of Mercy:

you are serving the God who has blessed you,
you are serving your neighbor who needs you,
and you are doing something you love!

That is a pretty good ROI.

Hope to hear from you soon!
